EXCA JUDGES FORUM TO BE HELD AT THE WORLD FINALS IN GLEN ROSE, TX

It's official; by popular demand, the EXCA is pleased to offer its first "Judging forum" at this year's World Show. The event will take place on Tuesday, October 31st at 9:00 AM.

This event is an educational, no formal testing event intended to get everyone updated and "on the same page" in regards to EXCA's founding philosophies and pillars of competition, rules, interpretations, applications, expectations, exceptions, best practices, scoring, handling challenges, and giving those in attendance an opportunity to get all their questions on any matters pertaining to competition and judging. The format will be limited to classroom presentation only; no formal written testing or practice judging/live testing will be included due to time and space restraints. Official credit will be given to all judges that are able to attend the entire presentation - which is often an important consideration by show managements considering hiring their judges .... and an important consideration on applications to move to a higher level.

The World Show attracts members from around the world - as such an ideal place and time to hold this important presentation on all matters pertaining to "getting it right" on the score cards and in those challenging situations and exceptions. Attendance is open and encouraged for all judges, judging candidates, exhibitors at all levels, scribes, contestants, and event organizers. The cost will be $20 per person. You must register and pay in advance. Attendance will be limited to those who have preregistered. Click here to register and pay.

The podium will be shared by Craig Cameron - our founder, CEO, and Extreme Cowboy Racing mentor and Guru; and Pete Fraser- the EXCA's Director of Judging and Judges. They are committed to offering a very focused, fast paced, and informative program that addresses wide ranging matters of judging most often raised by our EXCA membership. Your questions on specific procedures/incidents/exceptions/difficult situations etc. will form a very important part of the presentation and getting the factual answers to "get it right/getting it consistently applied/ and generating score cards that stand up to the scrutiny of an increasingly knowledgeable competitor pool.

Be sure to bring your pencils and note pads or note taking devices to help capture key points on our ambitious list of points to be addressed. General areas of presentation/discussion will include such things as:

- A brief history of just how we got here, where we are going, how influential good/bad judging can impact our sport, and EXCA's "spirit of competition" pillars.
- Key elements of horsemanship how it impacts obstacle scores as well as assigning final horsemanship score *understanding difference between hard n fast rules and general guidelines *getting the right answers to past and future tests - learning to combine multiple rules, what exceptions can apply, the critical distinctions between "shall and should"
- Common misinterpretations and why getting it right matters
- Best practices of successful judges easy to correct bad habits and maximizing your chances of success
- How much discretion a judge may rightfully assume without breaking the "spirit or intent of a rule"
- How trainers can best address conflicts of interest or divided priorities when in a judging role
- What appear to be exceptions to the rule really aren't
- Practical help for creating consistent and accurate scores avoiding carryover impressions from one obstacle to next, making sure every obstacle is a new opportunity to succeed, and not judging reputation and belt buckles.

- Fairly and accurately "reporting the news" getting it right on the scorecards (that more and more are being shared and scrutinized *judges responsibilities in regards to courses, walk throughs, improper behavior, injured animals, illegal or inhumane equipment, safety concerns, declaring "arena conditions" when things can't be same for everyone *working as a team with fellow judge and scribes expectations, best practices, getting the end decisions right, why scribes can be your best advantage or your worst nightmare *maximizing the chances of getting it right what exhibitors can fairly expect, why respect and consideration towards all exhibitors matter, and why we lose good judges for all the wrong reasons
- When things go wrong, judges are expected to lead.
- AND YOUR VALUED QUESTIONS GENERATED FROM ALL OF THE ABOVE THAT NEED FURTHER EXPLANATION OR DETAIL.

In addition, Pete Fraser has agreed to stay available as long as needed after the formal program ends to discuss specific topics or details related to EXCA judging matters. This will let those who have had enough learning for the day or are needed elsewhere to leave in good faith, while a more casual opportunity to keep the discussions going will be available to anyone who wishes. This will be particularly useful for those wanting further help in specific areas, addressing sensitive matters, how to spread the word at home, etc. He will turn out the lights when your last question is answered.

Craig has also asked Pete to offer "ghost judging" opportunities to interested members of our judging core. This is an ideal opportunity to be in the arena with the Director of Judges to test your scores on live runs, get helpful hints and direction, and hone your skills in a very challenging but realistic environment. It usually consists of 1-3 individuals working with Pete for 40-60 minutes ghost judging part or all of a class. Many who have taken advantage of this opportunity have earned World Show assignments down the road. Further details on how to get on the list will be released once Pete's other duties and assignments at the show are finalized.

Please seriously consider attending this JUDGING FORUM - and consequentially being a very important part of EXCA's commitment to "getting it right and spreading the word to those back home"

Extreme cowboy racing on the rise in Australia, members encourage more people to give it a go.

ABC Wide Bay by Pat Heagney 7-12-23

Meet Deb McGhee, Australia's extreme cowboy racing champion.

If you haven't heard of the competition, chances are you're not alone.

But loyalists to the country's fastest-growing equine sport — which includes water crossings and lassoing — hope it will soon become a household name.

"I've always wanted a horse, ever since I was a little girl," Ms McGhee said.

"They're just a great animal and great to be around."

Just 18 months after taking to the arena at an extreme cowboy racing competition in Agnes Water, 500 kilometres north of Brisbane, she won the Australian novice championships held in Ballarat in Victoria.

"I was looking for something a bit different, and it's a bit of a race, so it's meant to be pretty extreme," she said.

"Ever since then I've been hooked, it's just amazing."

Despite its growth in popularity in recent years, there are fewer than 15 extreme cowboy racing clubs in Australia.

Members of local groups have been travelling to regional shows across the country in a push to get more people involved.

"We are really keen to push and grow the sport," Southern Cross Extreme Cowboy vice president Janeen Greaves said.

"We're really keen to help and promote other clubs if they want to get involved too."

Ms Greaves said it had been hard convincing people that despite the "extreme" name, the sport was not a "full blown yahoo thing".

"That's been our biggest obstacle, I think, to explain that it's not just come and go flat out and flog your horse," she said.

"We're not about that at all.

"We're looking for horses with willing riders who are kind and those horse and rider combinations that work really well together."

So, what is it?

Extreme cowboy racing has its origins in Texas in the US, where a wellknown equestrian invented the sport to help his students improve their relationship with their horses.

It involves competitors navigating an arena full of obstacles.

Ms Greaves said the sport was "completely different" to equestrian sports like dressage and show jumping.

"It's a combination of a whole range of disciplines that are incorporated into the one sport."

Competitors are scored for their horsemanship and speed, as well as their ability to complete obstacles.

"Basically, you're pointed on each obstacle," Ms Greaves said.

"You get points for how you approach the obstacle, how you get through it and how you depart from the obstacle.

"Then you add up all the obstacle scores, you add in your horsemanship score and then the time comes into it as well."

Judge James Scott said the obstacles could include water crossings, bridges and even lassoing.

"The obstacles that are out there are to mimic what you do on the farm," he said.

"We might have a rope gate, you might go and do some roping to catch a cow, your step-up bridges are like when you're coming into a creek crossing and you've got to step up and out.

"It's to mimic those sorts of circumstances that you might come across that you and your horse are going to have to tackle on your own."

Changing courses, party atmosphere

Mr Scott said to make the sport even more exciting, the course obstacles and order changed every competition.

"You'll see courses that are very close, but you'll never come across the same course twice," he said.

"You don't know what you've got until 10 minutes before you walk out."

Ms Greaves said the extreme cowboy racing crowds also set the sport apart.

"We are quite loud in our sport," she said.

"It's not like other equestrian sports where you can't really clap until the very end, we're far from that.

"We cheer, we yahoo, we've got loud music going so yeah, it's quite a party atmosphere."

World championships

With Australian champion under her belt, Ms McGhee has turned her attentions to the world championships in Texas in November.

"I think world champion would just be amazing, I think that's the next step for me now, just at the novice level," she said.

She said she was excited to compete against extreme riders from across the world.

"They ride in Belgium, Israel, France, of course Australia, so I would just love to go over to America and compete. That would be amazing," she said. Ms McGhee said she encouraged other riders to follow in her footsteps and try their hand at extreme cowboying.

"You've got to give it a go," she said.

"It challenges yourself, challenges your horses and you've got to smile and have fun."
