DON'T FORGET TO SIGN UP FOR THE EXCA JUDGES FORUM TO BE HELD AT THE WORLD FINALS IN GLEN ROSE, TX

It's official; by popular demand, the EXCA is pleased to offer its first "Judging forum" at this year's World Show. The event will take place on Tuesday, October 31st at 9:00 AM.

This event is an educational, no formal testing event intended to get everyone updated and "on the same page" in regards to EXCA's founding philosophies and pillars of competition, rules, interpretations, applications, expectations, exceptions, best practices, scoring, handling challenges, and giving those in attendance an opportunity to get all their questions on any matters pertaining to competition and judging. The format will be limited to classroom presentation only; no formal written testing or practice judging/live testing will be included due to time and space restraints. Official credit will be given to all judges that are able to attend the entire presentation - which is often an important consideration by show managements considering hiring their judges and an important consideration on applications to move to a higher level.

The World Show attracts members from around the world - as such an ideal place and time to hold this important presentation on all matters pertaining to "getting it right" on the score cards and in those challenging situations and exceptions. Attendance is open and encouraged for all judges, judging candidates, exhibitors at all levels, scribes, contestants, and event organizers. The cost will be $20 per person. You must register and pay in advance. Attendance will be limited to those who have preregistered. Click here to register and pay.

The podium will be shared by Craig Cameron - our founder, CEO, and Extreme Cowboy Racing mentor and Guru; and Pete Fraser- the EXCA's Director of Judging and Judges. They are committed to offering a very focused, fast paced, and informative program that addresses wide ranging matters of judging most often raised by our EXCA membership. Your questions on specific procedures/incidents/exceptions/difficult situations etc. will form a very important part of the presentation and getting the factual answers to “get it right/getting it consistently applied/ and generating score cards that stand up to the scrutiny of an increasingly knowledgeable competitor pool.

Be sure to bring your pencils and note pads or note taking devices to help capture key points on our ambitious list of points to be addressed. General areas of presentation/discussion will include such things as:

- A brief history of just how we got here, where we are going, how influential good/bad judging can impact our sport, and EXCA’s “spirit of competition” pillars.
- Key elements of horsemanship - how it impacts obstacle scores as well as assigning final horsemanship score *understanding difference between hard n fast rules and general guidelines *getting the right answers to past and future tests - learning to combine multiple rules, what exceptions can apply, the critical distinctions between “shall and should”
- Common misinterpretations and why getting it right matters
- Best practices of successful judges - easy to correct bad habits and maximizing your chances of success
- How much discretion a judge may rightfully assume without breaking the “spirit or intent of a rule”
- How trainers can best address conflicts of interest or divided priorities when in a judging role
- What appear to be exceptions to the rule really aren’t
- Practical help for creating consistent and accurate scores - avoiding carryover impressions from one obstacle to next, making sure every obstacle is a new opportunity to succeed, and not judging reputation and belt buckles.
- Fairly and accurately “reporting the news” - getting it right on the scorecards (that more and more are being shared and scrutinized *judges responsibilities in regards to courses, walk throughs, improper behavior, injured animals, illegal or inhumane equipment, safety concerns, declaring “arena conditions” when things can’t be same for everyone *working as a team with fellow judge and scribes - expectations, best practices, getting the end decisions right, why scribes can be your best advantage or your worst nightmare *maximizing the chances of getting it right - what exhibitors can fairly expect, why respect and consideration towards all exhibitors matter, and why we lose good judges for all the wrong reasons
- When things go wrong, judges are expected to lead.
- AND YOUR VALUED QUESTIONS GENERATED FROM ALL OF THE ABOVE THAT NEED FURTHER EXPLANATION OR DETAIL.

In addition, Pete Fraser has agreed to stay available as long as needed after the formal program ends to discuss specific topics or details related to EXCA judging matters. This will let those who have had enough learning for the day or are needed elsewhere to leave in good faith, while a more casual opportunity to keep the discussions going will be available to anyone who wishes. This will be particularly useful for those wanting further help in specific areas, addressing sensitive matters, how to spread the word at home, etc. He will turn out the lights when your last question is answered.

Craig has also asked Pete to offer “ghost judging” opportunities to interested members of our judging core. This is an ideal opportunity to be in the arena with the Director of Judges to test your scores on live runs, get helpful hints and direction, and hone your skills in a very challenging but realistic environment. It usually consists of 1-3 individuals working with Pete for 40-60 minutes ghost judging part or all of a class. Many who have taken advantage of this opportunity have earned World Show assignments down the road. Further details on how to get on the list will be released once Pete’s other duties and assignments at the show are finalized.

Please seriously consider attending this JUDGING FORUM - and consequentially being a very important part of EXCA’s commitment to “getting it right and spreading the word to those back home”

Forever young: Octogenarian competes in Cowboy Up Challenge

This year, 80-year-old Jim Ochs competed in the Calgary Stampede's highly selective and gruelling Cowboy Up Challenge

Competing with his horse in extreme cowboy races has kept 80-year-old Jim Ochs young. The Kansas cowboy raced against the best of the best through the gruelling obstacles of the Cowboy Up Challenge at the Calgary Stampede this week.

"It's kept me healthy and young – for my age," said Ochs on Wednesday.

Ochs and his wife, Joyce, hail from Gridley, Kansas, a tiny town about 178 kilometres northeast of Wichita. They are among the 360 people who live there.

The two met at a college rodeo club that Ochs helped start.

He had become interested in horses in high school and participated in rodeo for a few years. But his love for horses was set aside when Ochs served in the American military and began raising three kids with Joyce.

Following his military service, Ochs landed a job in education and ended up in a principal role for nearly 40 years.

"After retiring, my wife said, 'Jim, why don't we get a horse?' I didn't really want to, I'd been away from it for so long. But we got one."

He got into the Extreme Cowboy Race community and has competed for 12 years. This is his fourth year with his current horse, A Moonlit Request.

Calgary Stampede's Cowboy Up Challenge highly selective

Ochs was thrilled to receive an invitation to compete in the Calgary Stampede's Cowboy Up Challenge, after having success in US competitions.

The Cowboy Up Challenge judges both horse and riders' skills as they maneuver through 13 obstacles, including jumps, water and other terrain.

"You have to memorize the course. And you're not given much time to do that," Ochs said. "I'm always pretty nervous until I start, and then that all goes away."

With speed and agility, the team of horse and rider work together to negotiate their way through the course.

According to the Calgary Stampede, their event is the most viewed and highest paying extreme cowboy race in the world. First prize in the championship round is $10,000, followed by prizes of $1,000 to $5,000 for the rest of the competitors.

Only a select few are invited to compete. This year's event has nine competitors, five from Alberta, three from the US and one from Australia.

Ochs won hearts of Calgary audience "I had my 80th birthday in February, and to compete with these people has been very challenging. I haven't been winning, but I've had a great time," said Ochs of the three days of the competition.

"With the size of the crowd, the lights and the music, my horse is a little bit out of his element. Me too, actually. We both are out of our comfort zone."

"And the other riders are the best of the best."

Och posted respectable scores and said he's knocked competing at the Calgary Stampede off his bucket list.

He not only won the hearts of the Cowboy Up audience, who cheered loudly for him, but was honored by the Calgary Stampede organization with an award for strength of character.

"It was totally unexpected, and I'm humbled," he said.
